

O Come All Ye Faithful

"O come let us adore Him!" says this classic carol. This arrangement was born out of reflections on what it must have been like to come and adore.

The first verse is quiet and contained, yet with much anticipation, just as the poor, unschooled shepherds called on by angels, and foreign wise men beckoned by a strange star, must have been approaching the stable.

The second verse is more confident, as the sight of God becoming a vulnerable infant would inspire one to proudly proclaim: Emmanuel, "God with us!"

And finally, the third verse bursts into triumphant harmony, as the world gloriously proclaims that the Almighty Lord has humbled Himself to walk among us and save us from sin.
